Byron's Sister His Best Friend

Brilliant But Profligate Poet Had One Noble Quality in His Devotion to Augusta.

BY MADISON C. PETERS.

Copyright, 1917, by Madison C. Peters.

THE handsome faced Byron was annoyed to the ends of his days by his club foot. His mother, the worst enemy he ever had, taunted him as a "lame brat."

Byron was never raised, he "just grew." His father was a sports, his mother a fool, and he was an epileptic. His career was as erratic as it was brilliant, a meteor flash which illumined the 19th century.

Byron loved recklessly and successively. At nine years of age he followed Mary Duff around and gathered flowers for her from surrounding brambles. At 15 Mary Ann Chaworth was to use his own words, "The bean-ideal of my fancy could paint of beautiful."

When she was heard to remark, "Do you think I could care for that lame boy?" he rushed from the house like a madman, and buried himself in one of his chambers, there, she to a premature grave, he to a career of dissipation.

"Child Harold" made Byron famous over night. London became Byron mad. The fair ones of society were most gushing of all the hero worshipers was lady Caroline Lamb, daughter-in-law of one of the proudest dukes in England and wife of one of its greatest statesmen. She had an irresistible charming personality, but was excessively vain. She really believed no man could look upon her beauty without falling in love with her. She determined to capture Byron. Caroline's mother-in-law had terrible tales to tell of Byron's orgies within the walls of the ancestral abbey.

While her illustrious husband was busy caring for his political welfare, Caroline watched for the poet in the streets and at midnight walked the garden of St. James palace, in the hope that Byron might come to her, but he came off in spite of his profession that he "would with pleasure give up all here or beyond the grave for her."

Then Isabelle Millbanks became his wife, for a while. In his violent fits of rage he accused her of ruining his life. One day she came into his room, where he was writing, and he apologized, saying: "I hope I am not in the way, Byron. 'Damnably' get out," was the retort.

The intricate with Jane Clarendon loved. She had appealed to him to get her on the stage; at a glance he saw she would make a poor actress, but a good mistress. On the 29th birthday she gave proof of her unsanctified love in a daughter, Augusta. The wife from whom he had been parted, deeded his signature to the legal deed of separation, on pain of being brought before the ecclesiastical courts. The queen of society who found in the proud privilege of having Byron's presence at their tables now vied with each other to hurl calumnies upon his head and on April 23, 1816, he sailed away from his home-land, never to look upon its landscape again.

The Italian princess Giocoll forms a romantic chapter in his voluntary exile. Byron, whose escapades shocked the continent of Europe, had some sweet and noble qualities, and his better traits nowhere shine out with such steady luster as in the constancy of loving tenderness with which he cherished his sister Augusta. When all the world turned against him, she was all the world to her brother. How he appreciated her fond fidelity forms one of the brightest pages in the world's literature.

The last intellible words of Byron were: "Augusta, my sister."

FIRE CAPTAINS MEAN TO SEE FIRE CAUSES REMOVED

Inspection trips for the purpose of removing all combustible material likely to cause fire in their districts were made by the captains of the seven fire companies of the city Wednesday morning. The record number of alarms during the month of February, the greater part of which were caused by carelessness, it is believed, have resulted in a strict inspection of all back yards and premises. The city ordinance applying to combustible materials in part is as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any owner or occupant of any building or premises, or any vacant lot or enclosure, in the city of El Paso, Texas, to leave or cause to be left or permitted to be left in any building, or on any premises, loose and scattered, or in any receptacle other than a fireproof one with a suitable cover, any paper, rags, boxes, sweepings, shavings, hay, straw or any combustible material liable to cause a fire, or that would be instrumental in spreading fire."

TEXAS GOVERNOR MOUNTS BRONCO BY MISTAKE; THROWN

Fort Worth, Texas, March 12.—Gov. James H. Ferguson was recovering from a day from which he sustained yesterday when he mounted a bronco by mistake and was thrown and pinned under the horse. It had been used in a wild west exhibition here. After he was thrown, the governor mounted the horse and rode it around the ring, intending to ride in the arena with mayor-elect W. D. Davis, the governor was waiting for a mount. One of the

Washing Won't Rid Head Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—Advertisement.

"The Girl From Rector's"

A FINANCIAL TRIUMPH is "The Girl From Rector's." It has been played more times and in more places as an attraction of the speaking stage than any play produced in the last decade. Its London run has been one of the marvels of the British metropolis. As a photoplay it is more appealing than ever.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN is displayed in "The Girl From Rector's" at its best and at its worst. It is a play that tells the truth about humanity. It displays the fact that the very bad are sometimes very good and that the very good are often very bad. It punctures sophistries and handles euphemisms. It is a true story.

A FLASH OF LIGHTNING that lights up the unknown landscape and reveals its most intimate detail for a brief period, is what "The Girl From Rector's" is to hundreds of thousands of Americans who have never familiarized themselves with the life of "The Great White Way."

THE GLITTER OF GOLD and the shining glass chandeliers, the snowy napery and flashing silver of "Rector's" form a fascinating background for an extraordinary story told with the utmost skill and acted with extraordinary finesse. The play is a dramatic treat. It is a play that gets under the skin—a play one never can forget.

A BRILLIANT PLAY that actualizes in every situation and is alive with thrilling episode—a play that engrosses and fascinates, that holds the attention of every spectator from the first moment to the close, is "The Girl From Rector's."
